SPANISH PROVERBS AND SAYINGS - newly translated into English

As the newest addition to this popular series, the editor has collected and translated Spanish proverbs on the subjects of Health, Animals, Karma, Relationships, Warnings, Good Advice, and much more. As always, these proverbs make the perfect reading matter for people too busy for longer texts. This is the English-only version (a bilingual edition is also available).

A small sample:

If you want fish, you'll have to get your ass wet.

When everyone tells you that you are an ass, it is time to bray and get a tail.

Since you've already learnt how to charge money, better also learn how to work.

Who envies you does just as much for your reputation, as who praises you.

If you cannot be chaste, be careful.

If you want the dog, accept the fleas.

Oxen will not gore each other.

With a contract, even the dog and cat can be friends.

When you see your neighbour's beard being cut, start wetting your own.

There are many more proverbs and sayings here, both instructive and entertaining - enjoy!
