If I See You First (A Short Story) Tia Clark

This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Shainey had only known Jamilah for five months, but to the college freshman, that felt like a lifetime. As two of the few black girls on campus, they'd stuck together—except, of course, for the times when thrill-seeking Jamilah got too drunk or high and abandoned Shainey for some random frat guy.

For SpringFest, the college's biggest all-day concert, the young women had planned to go to Greek row to party. But Jamilah is nowhere to be found. While navigating a campus full of students in varying states of insobriety, Shainey must put aside her anxieties about being an outsider, her own unspoken desires, and the distracting demands of others in order to find a friend who may just prefer to remain lost.
