Wild Words helps you Beat Writers' Block! Having trouble thinking of what to write? Sometimes a writer, like an old car, needs a kick-start! We are The Writers' Kickstart Group! To practice creating new ideas, we write from "prompts." A prompt is a word or phrase that gives a writer something to think about, to stimulate ideas for creative writing. Anyone can suggest a prompt, and usually three prompts are selected at each meeting. Members can use any or all of the prompts to write a story, article, or poem for the next meeting. Wild Words provides examples of 100 prompts, and the wildly differing stories, articles and poems created from them. As practice, you could select any of these prompts and write your own stories from them. Try writing something from one of the prompts each week. Soon, you'll be developing your own prompts, and your own stories. Writing Instructors may also find this book useful as an aid for their students in creating new ideas.
