When the Vow Breaks Cynthia L. Berry, Sheila Taylor-Downer

Plagued with the temptations that many married women encounter, Ravinia Hamilton arrives on the scene with her heart in one hand and a Bible in the other. Along the way, she finds that the challenges of life can be a bit more than one woman can handle on her own. After consulting therapist, Sapphire Sykes, who also shares a deep, dark secret, Ravinia is thrust into an abrupt reality that sends her on a downward cycle with no end in sight. Then enters Jade Jackson, an unfulfilled housewife, desperately seeking out ways to 'spice up' her marriage. Teetering on the hope that her husband will eventually change his ways, Jade's uncertain future makes her wonder how long she can remain faithful. Constantly seeking redemption for past and present woes, solace is found in the knowing that sometimes you have to help someone else in order to help yourself. By giving of themselves in ways they never knew possible, the will to survive emerges through the travels of life, love, and even death.
