Antibiotic resistance is a problem at both individual and global level. If the world community cannot agree to the end of excessive use of synthetic antibiotics, the day might soon come where masses of drug-resistant bacteria overpower the human body. Although there are cases where conventional drug antibiotics are the necessary choice because no alternative cure exists, such as cases of sepsis (blood infections), certain pneumonias, kidney infections, and excessively high fevers, the main issue is whether antibiotics are being used responsibly and only when necessary. If you are ready to embrace more natural forms of medicine, naturopathic doctors and holistic physicians well-trained in botanicals can help you get started and decide which herbs are appropriate for your current condition.
