From the book's cover: "Negro literature in America took a long time maturing. The earliest Negro writers after the Civil War ignored the rich potentialities in the subject area of race relations and wrote instead of the plantation tradition long after its demise. This collection of nine short stories by Charles Chestnutt was the first Negro fiction to attract the attention of the white literacy world and reading public as a serious treatment of social problems in postbellum society. . . Charles W. Chestnutt (1858-1932) grew up in the South during what he called "one of the most eventful eras of its history." Self-educated beyond grade school, he became a respected educator, lawyer and author."
